

Susan Holcombe's teaching and publication builds on a career of practice and a focus on building capabilities for human development. She is particularly interested in the management and implementation of development policies, programs and projects

Immediately prior joining the Programs in Sustainable International Development at the Heller School, Professor Holcombe was Program Director for Oxfam America. She has served in various positions with UNFPA, UNIFEM and UNICEF in New York and in field postings. She has participated in or led field evaluations and assessments for Ford Foundation, UNFPA, UNICEF, UNDP, World Bank and the University of the South Pacific. Among the places she has extended field experience are China, including the Tibet Autonomous Region; Bangladesh, Sudan, Fiji, Pakistan; Afghanistan; and East Africa.

Currently Professor Holcombe teaches in the MA and MS Programs in Sustainable International Development, including Frameworks for Development; Demographics of Development; and Managing Policy and Practice Change in Health Systems. She continues field level work supporting the Tibet Poverty Alleviation Fund (www.tpaf.org) with program planning and monitoring.

Professor Holcombe's publications include:

- Holcombe, Susan; Nawaz, Safia Ali; Kamwendo, Anderson; & Ba, Khady. "Managing Development: NGO Perspectives." (2004): 187-206.
- Holcombe, Susan & Offenheiser, Raymond C.. Challenges and Opportunities in Implementing a Rights-based Approach to Development: An Oxfam America Perspective. Non-Profit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly, 2003.
- Holcombe, Susan. Managing to Empower. Zed Books, 1995.