Z plays "Chutes & Ladders"

February 7, 2011

From a Z Winter Guard press release

Z's show features choreography and equipment work on a larger-than-life-sized blue and white game board. Guard members, dressed as human game pieces, maneuver across the floor to Knee Play and Serra Palada by Philip Glass.

The guard gets the game going with a flag and sabre feature atop three bright yellow ladders, illustrating the rewards of doing good deeds. Members then transition to a rifle piece while descending two red chutes, representing punishment for being bad.

Z Winter Guard will compete at the WGI Regionals in Richmond, Indianapolis, Dayton and Nashville. Z Winter Guard captured the Independent Regional A title at the WGI Dayton Regional and also made a third place showing at the WGI Nashville Regional in 2010.

Director Bill Burroway says it's been an exciting show to create and stage this year. Choreography / equipment collaboration includes Chelle Cartee and Kristina Franklin (dance); Maurica Richardson and Jason Meadows (flag); Burroway and Joshua Lear (rifle / sabre). Z Winter Guard includes members ranging in age from 14 to 21 from Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia.
